

Still Standing

I think we can all agree that 2020 was a hot mess. From Coronavirus to Zoom meetings, this year was horrible. From the required mask-wearing to the controversial politics, we as a community have suffered many hardships. As a world, we can agree that this year's troubles have changed the way people act, the way they communicate, and the way people behave.

The way people act has changed because of Coronavirus. Some people take this seriously and others want it to be over. Many people mourned tremendously last year. People can't even go and talk to people and interact with them the way they are used to interacting prior to the pandemic. As a whole, people are not as friendly and take things way more seriously.

The way people communicate has changed tremendously. People are used to going over to people's houses, but now that's not the case. You have to do Zoom and Google Meets to talk to people. Some even have to do this for school! You even have to wear a mask to go anywhere. Most people don't even communicate because they quarantine themselves. The lack of face-to-face interaction has taken a toll on many of us mentally and emotionally.

The way people behave has changed. People are constantly telling others to wear a mask. Our whole country has divided over politics and have not been acting together. People don't respect others because of their beliefs. Some people are tired of quarantine and are ready for Coronavirus to be over.

We as a community can agree that 2020 was a year we will never forget- from the limited interactions to the amount of deaths, we have suffered tremendously. This pandemic has truly changed the way people act, the way they communicate, and the way people behave. Even through the amount of loss, and even though we have been pushed to the limit, we are still standing.
